Pip Nicholls

Prior to becoming a spiritual companion and retreat leader in 2007, I worked for 24 years in the disability and older peoples sectors. My roles were predominately in management and training and development so it was a natural transition to want to offer retreats and workshops when I turned my attention towards my current work.

I was keen to offer the type of retreats that weren't available to me in my 20's. That is, where the retreat or workshop offers the opportunity for people to be open to transformation, metanoia being that great 'change of heart' that Paul asks of us. This process is more than an activity of the intellect. It also awakens the intuitive and imaginative faculties and the response to the retreat involves an inner resonance not primarily with the information shared, rather with the silence and dynamic it seeks to express.

I am happy to tailor a retreat to any parish or communities wishes, to any age group and to any denomination (and none).
